Final Consonants.

Final Consonants have no proper equivalents in Sgau Karen; the Vowel Inflections, however, perform, to a considerable extent, the office which final consonants perform in most other languages, viz. they modify the sounds of the vowels to which they belong. In transferring Foreign Terms into Karen, certain vowel inflections may be used to indicate that certain final consonants follow, as shown in the preceding Tables.

* or sometimes ခ.

When the final consonant of one syllable coalesces with the initial consonant of a syllable following in the same word, that final consonant is indicated by the use of the specified vowel inflection; as, in Burmah, ဘၢ်မၤ, the r, of the first syllable is sufficiently indicated by ၢ်, and the r is dropped.

In case they do not coalesce, as in Biscay, the specified vowel inflection is used to modify the vowel sound, and the consonant follows as an intermediate syllable, to be pronounced with as little stress of voice as possible: thus Biscay, ဘိၣ်စကၠူၤ.

In case the following syllable commences with a vowel, the specified vowel inflection is used for the purpose above noted, and the final consonant made initial to said vowel; thus, Bith'i-a, ဘိၣ်သအၤ; or Car'i ah ကၢ်ရှအၤ.

A syllable ending with r, or re, when pronounced as two syllables, (as more, pure, poor,) this pronounciation may be obtained thus, more မိအၢ်; pure, ပူအၢ်; poor, ပူအၢ်: shire, ၡံအၢ်, &c.

In syllables ending with rt, rd, rk, &c. as Cork, Port, the two finals may be indicated by ၣ်; thus, Cork, ကိၣ်; Port, ပိၣ်; or thus, Cork, ကိၢ်ခး; Port, ပိၢ်ထး. This rule refers to said syllables as ultimates; if otherwise, they are treated according to rules above, thus Fort Louis, ဖိၢ်လူၤအိၣ်.

When a final consonant of a terminative syllable requires to be expressed in order to distinguish the name, or term from another similar one, (or for some other purpose,) said final consonant must be made an extra syllable, with some mark to indicate its finality. For this purpose the Pwo inflection ၬ is adopted; it is to be sounded the same as it is in Pwo, that is, the same as း in Sgau, which would itself be used here if it had not already been appropriated to another purpose. To use it for both purposes would cause confusion; for instance, Job, if written ယိဘး would be confounded with Jobab ယိဘး; but, if we write Job, ယိဘၬ, and Jobab ယိဘး, the names become distinct to the eye, though the same to the ear.

I have also adopted the Pwo inflection ၪ to indicate a finall (as ၥ် indicates a final nasal), the advantage of which will soon be felt by practice in transferring foreign terms into Karen. Its pronunciation in reading is the same as that of ၥ်.

Drop all silent letters.

Derivative names, indicating race, profession, trade, sect, &c., require only that the root be transferred with ပှၤ prefixed, and ဖိ affixed, thus ၡံၥ် China, ပှၤၡံၥ်ဖိ, Chinaman: —ခရံၣ် Christ, ပှၤခရံၣ်ဖိ Christian; —ပၤပၤ Pope, ပှၤပၤပၤဖိ Papist; —မဟိၥ်မ့း Mahomet, ပှၤမဟိၥ်မ့းဖိ Mahomedan.

No rules can be given for the orthography of Karenized foreign names and terms with so much definiteness as to secure entire uniformity, in as much as English authorities differ in regard to accent, orthography, and sound of the vowels in many of the proper names.

Besides this, many English sounds have no perfect equivalents in Karen, and vice versa: so that it may sometimes be doubtful which vowel, consonant, or inflection should be chosen as most nearly equivalent to the foreign sound.

It is believed, however, that an observance of the above rules will secure quite as much uniformity in the Orthography of foreign terms in Karen as we find in English, and that the process is simple and easy.
